Tour Summary

Well known for Washington, D.C.'s spring explosion of cherry blossoms, the Tidal Basin offers history and beauty all year. With interesting architecture, historical displays, and relaxing areas to take in the stunning views, the Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Jefferson Memorials should not be missed. The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum explores a serious topic and encourages reflection on an event that is difficult to comprehend. Finally, a visit to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where millions of dollars are printed each day, inspires dreams of goodies to purchase or adventures to experience, with just a bit of that money.

Around the Tidal Basin

Any time of the day...

...and any season of the year...

...Washington, D.C., is a great destination.

It's fun and exciting when there is an event that brings huge crowds, and...

...it's relaxing when the sidewalks are empty. A walk around the Tidal Basin provides both types of experiences, depending on the season.

The busiest time, and some say the prettiest, is when the cherry blossoms are in bloom.

But any time can provide a relaxing stroll along the water, a chance to learn about...

...Presidents Franklin Delano Roosevelt and...

...Thomas Jefferson, and the opportunity to get some exercise.

There are monuments and memorials throughout the area that have great architectural beauty as well as historical significance, and many are within walking distance from the Tidal Basin.

Have your picture taken just inches away from one million dollars in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and...

...reflect on one of the momentous events of World War II at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.
