Tour Summary

Boston may be old and historic and Brahmin-fussy, but with half a million students infused into the mix each year, it has to stay young. So, our boutiques are trendy, our Red Sox and Fenway Park are the best in sports, our theater district now has dorms above a stage, and there's ballet in the old opera house. We dance over the Charles River, which has some bridges with funky traditions, and our food is way better than baked beans and cod. You want protests? Is the original Tea Party good enough?

Introduction

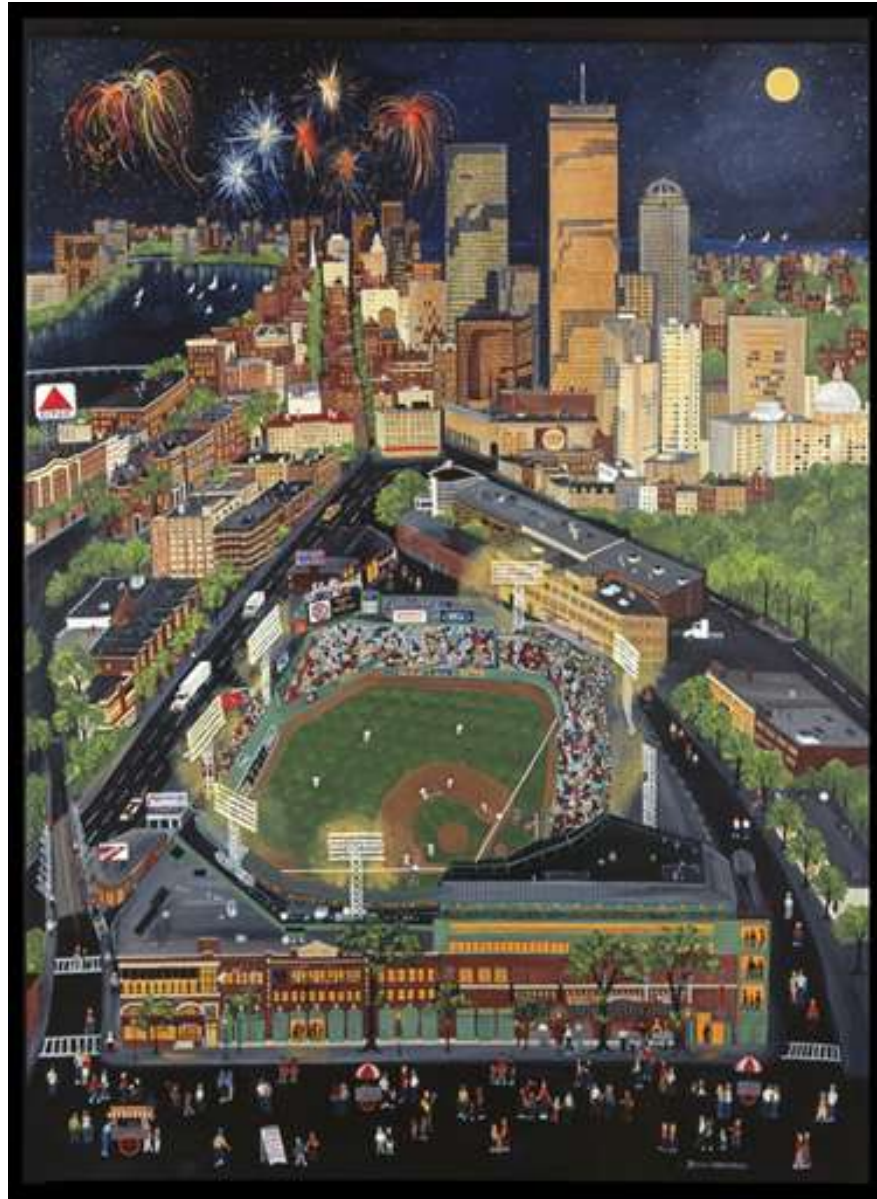

Boston has everything except warm winters. This tour will take you down our most fashionable street, Newbury...

...and across five of our bridges that span the Charles River. Each bridge has its own story...

...and one of them is hilarious.

We'll head into our beloved baseball field, Fenway Park, and...

...down the Royal Mile in the theater district, so named because it was there when the city was still a colony under the British king.

And we'll explore a few of our restaurants which, finally, have escalated from serving mainly baked beans and codfish to world-class cuisine.
